Brief Rems.—The Baptist church was rowded Monday night on the occasion of he marriage of Mr. Harvey Clarke, son of Mr. L. S. Clarke, one of our most promi-nent citizens, to Miss Emma Jones, daugh-ter of Mr. A. W. Jones, of Chesterfield. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Derieux, and Professor Nichols presided at the organ.

Some of the Easily-Constructed Arti cles Appropriate for Christmas.

PRETTY AND USEFUL PRESENTS-PIN-CUSHIONS AND BASKETS, PANS AND SLIPPERS, AND VA-RIOUS OTHER ARTICLES.

There is no lack this season of appropriate articles for Christmas-gifts which may we have stready spoken, but there are also ionumerable objects of ornament and use for people of all sorts, some costing only a few cents for materials, so that no one need be at a loss what to make for Christmas.

The many trifles manufactured of gilt for use as pin-cushious; all these are decorative and easily made. For the match board must be cut to cover them. These covers are ornamented with needlework or scrap pictures, and the affair is suspended by a ribbon. In this case the tapers should be made and the holder filled before giving the present. Newspaper holders are pretty and easily made. The frames for these are sold at fancy stores, and are merely wooden or paper-mache backs, with silts through which the straps pass. There are two of these straps of strong can-vas, bound with ribbon and worked in point Russe or cross stitch. These straps hold the newspapers, and may be let out or taken up, as desired. The holder is to be bung on the wall, and forms a most ornamental adjunct to a study table.

DECORATED BASKETS. Baskets of all kinds are popular and are variously decorated. Open wicker-baskets are still in great favor for waste-baskets, They are decorated with lambrequins made of cloth, velvet, or satteen. When this lastmed material is used, cretonne flowers may be transferred to the centre of each vandyke and finished with silk or crewels round the edge; small tassels floish the points. The smaller sizes have now been adopted as work-baskets, for which purpose they are lined with Turkey red, and the lining coming up beyond the top is used as a bag and gathered up with drawing-strings. These, bowever, are not new, but they de-now been adopted as flower-pot covers, and thanksgiving to be used yearly on the 29th very elegant ones they make, with their of May, in honor of the restoration of square gided handles standing up and the Charles the Second and the return of the two small rings hanging down as ornaments on either side. They can be decorated in many ways and take painting with great effect. An especially elegant one was stained black, gilded and painted, with a be handles at one side only.

Englishwomen are adapting the tall silk ats worn by gentlemen for waste-paper askets and work-baskets. Thes hats, when dismissed by their wearers, are usually only dismissed by their warets, as no one will wear a quarter worn, as no one will wear a "shocking bad hat" if it be possible to get a new one, and to many ladies to find a use for the discarded ones will be a great boon. When decorated and beautified they form When decorated and beautified they form really a useful and pretty novelty. The best way of making them up is to embroider the straight piece round the bat first; cut out a circle for the top, which will not need decoration, as it is not seen; then sew these on the hat securely, hiding the stitches round the crown with a cord of the colors used. The brim, cover, and the lining are prettiest of fluted material. A very elegant one was of black satin, embroidered or painted with red geraniums and the fluted lining and brim of red satin to match. To counteract the extreme light-banging-baskets. The outside is brushed all over with gold or black paint and allowed to dry thoroughly; the inside of the brim is lined with satur, and a bag top is put in the crown, which is drawn up with cords and tassels. Then the brim of the hat is turned up on one side and a bunch of dried grasses and artificial flowers is placed there, or for this may be substituted a bow of ribbon matching the lining. The hag is hung against the wall, turned with bag is hung against the wall, turned with

Very pretty work-baskets may be made of strawberry-baskets, lined with red Turkey twill or satio, the lining forming a bag, key I will or satio, the itning forming a nar, which draws up at the top with a ribbon, and when open turns down over the basket. Two pockets are set on opposite sides of the basket (inside of course), and a needlebook and straps for holding seissors, thimble, etc., are fastened to the others.

A bag-bottom is added, and the edges are finished with quilled ribbon. Slippers of the same material, fined and trimmed are used for time wall-pockets. trimmed, are used for tiny wall-pockets.

BOW TO MAKE A BLOTTING BOOK.

Blotting-books are easily made, and are very useful. Stiff crash, in two thicknesses, makes a good back for one of these. Cut the strips nine inches wide and sixteen in length. Work the outer one in cross-stitch with the monogram of the person for whom Blotting-books are easily made, and are with the monogram of the person for whom it is intended just where it will come in the centre of the upper lid of the book. Bind the edges with scarlet-woollen braid or with ribbon, so as to hold the pieces together. More elegant blotters are of satin or velvet, Woodward has won the esteem not only of made in the same way. Double the back through the middle, like the back of a book, and work two buttonboles lengthwise in the crease. Cut blotting paper to fit, forming say eight leaves, and fasten in by a forming say eight leaves, and fasten in by a ribbon passed in through one buttonhole and out at the other, through the paper, and tied at the back in a bow. Embroidery may be substituted for the monogram if desired, or eiching. For this list a design from Kate Grunaway's "Under the Window" or from "Mother Goose," etc., looks well. If you cannot draw, have the design stamped and mark the lines over A useful present, also, is a little case to be carried in the pocket when travelling, containing seissors, comb, pins, needles, black and white cotton (on fit winders), sticking plaster, stamps, button-hook, and thimble. This may be made of enamelled cloth or leather, with loops of elastic ar-ranged on it in such a manner that it will fold into a little packet about the size of letter and only a little thicker.

Tea costes grow in popularity, and are a once pretty and useful. They are made in cap shape to cover the teapot, and as their mission is to keep the tea hot must be warmly wadded and lined. Quilted silk, satin, or merino are the materials most used for them, but some are daintily embroidered or hand-painted.

The fashionable side-bags will figure large ly as Christmas presents this year. Those most liked are the flat bags, with plated rims and with catches and chain. Others are in reticule shape, plain or embroidered, and some are exquisitely hand-painted in flora designs.

Pin cushions are legion. The handsomes are of plush. Next comes silk or satin, so beautifully embroidered or painted that, as a lady said of one such, "it would be sin to stick a pin in it."

Fans also appear among fashionable fancy work. A five-cent Japanese fan with long be made at home. Art needlework as are plied to home decoration is the fashionable craze of the day. All manner of pretty trifles are popular, and the room looks barren which does not include some of them ren which the forms the foundation. This is covered with satin, embroidered, painted or trimmed with lace and flowers. Some have a butterfly, others a humming-bird in a nest a base and all are finished with satin ribof lace, and all are finished with satin rib-

Form small straps of safes there are many patterns, the best of which is, perhaps, the double sufe—two boat-shaped receptacles, one above the other, for matches and burnt ends respectively. Tins come for these, and the card-board must be cut to cover them. These wood; indeed, there is no limit to the forms > little baskets of three or four inches in diameter, just large enough to hold a spool of black cotton, one of white, a thimble, needle-book, and a tiny pair of selssors. Baskets of this kind are to be had resting on three legs, and may with a little patience and logenuity be made exceedingly pretty as well as useful. They should be sheath of the same color as the lining, if possible, and the needle-book should be small but convenient for holding two flat papers of needles and a leaf or two of fine flanuel. A little cord round the edge of the basket is a great improvement and finish. Such are some of the trifles which may be made as Christmas presents for those who will value the gift as part of the giver, be cause it is her own handiwork.

An Old Bible and Prayer-Book.

NOVEMBER 12, 1880. Editors of the Dispatch: I see great in-terest is now being manifested in regard to old Bibles and old prayer-books. I have old Bibles and old prayer-books. I have the Bible of my great-grandmother, which was even old in her day, and she was the sister of Patrick Henry. I, as the only daughter of Dr. Philip T. Southall, of Amelia county, inherited his grandmother's Bible. I have also an old prayer-book belonging to Major Wood, of Revolutionary memory, and great-grandfather to my first husband. This old prayer-book has a very long marriage-service that must have taken the counter some hours to go through, the the couple some hours to go through, the Holy Communion being a part of the service. It has also a Communication, or Denouncing of God's Anger and Judgments, to be used always on the first day of serve mention, as being both useful and cast to be used always on the first day of Lent. It has a form of prayer and fasting to be used yearly, on the 30th of January, The small waste-paper baskets, which can be purchased to plain white wicker, painted black and gilded by the purch-ser, have the property of the purchased to be purch Stoart family to England. The date of the prayer-book is unfortunately torn away. The printing is in the old style, now very bard to read. Between the leaves of this old stained black, gilded and painted, with a prayer-book is a slip of paper, yellow with wreath of large sunflowers in oils round the sides. Another method savors of the Japanesque. It is to paint a spray of flowers or a branch of fruit drooping from one of the behandles at one side only. and a bride, perhaps, now passed away more than a hundred years ago, leaving this little slip of paper, penned in a thoughtless moment, to her fourth generation.
